PORTAGE

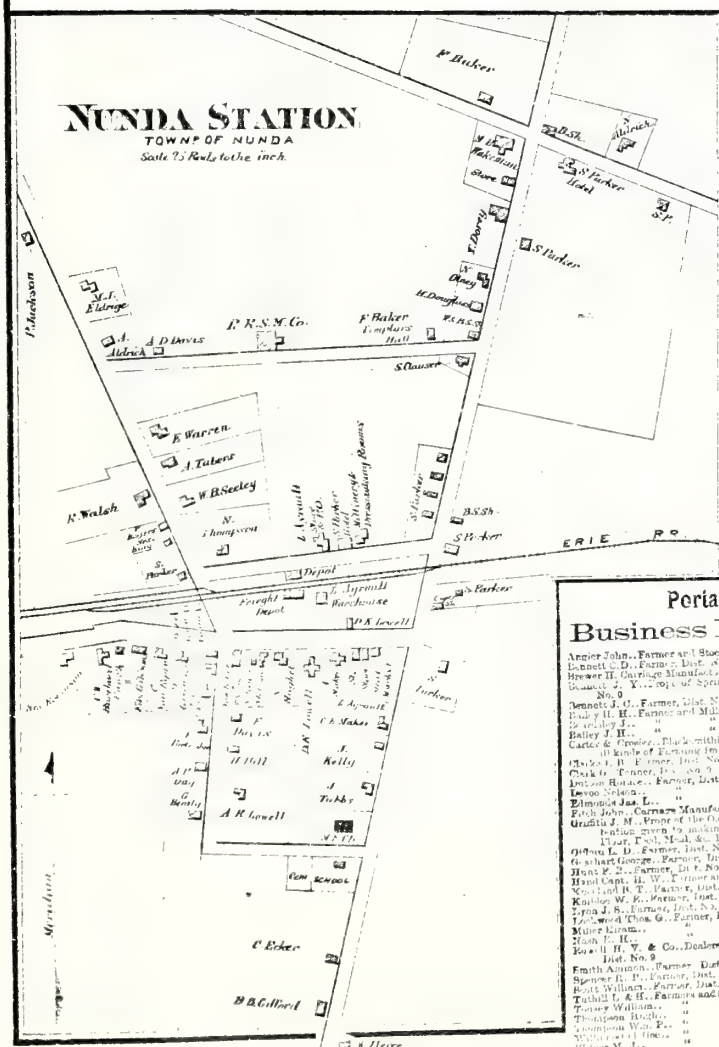

Scale 160 Rods to the inch

The Town of Portage is situated about the middle of the east side of a tract of 615 thousand acres, surveyed to Gerrit Coltinger in 1791, and known as the Coltinger tract. It was conveyed by him to John Horley, of Scotland, who sold the half of it in a single lot to his agent, John Drog, of Connecticut, for the sale of them. It was surveyed and subdivided in 1867 by Eliza Johnson. The lots are of various sizes, a mile long, 120 rods, and about one-half of a mile, or 107 rods wide, containing one hundred and sixty acres, the measurements vary, and generally over-run. Two Williams settled in the town in 1804, and in 1806. All the lands in the town have been sold. There are 101 lots and parts of lots, containing in all 10,580 acres. The town was a part of the original town of Lawrence County, at its first organization. It was separated from Lawrence County, and was made a part of Allegheny County in 1800, and was again set off as a part of Nunda in 1820. It was formed from Nunda as the town of Portage in 1827. It was about six miles square, bounded on the east by the Pigout line, and on the west by the Transit line. In 1841 it was set off from Allegheny County and annexed to Livingston County. At the same time from about one-third of it, lying on the west side of the river, was formed the town of Genesee Falls, and annexed to Wyoming County. The name "Portage" is derived from the portage, or carrying place, around the falls of Genesee River.
